COTA's History and Mission

COTA was founded in 1986 by a group of parents who had children waiting for organ transplants. These parents knew the financial and emotional challenges that families face when a child needs a transplant, and they wanted to help other families avoid these hardships.

COTA's mission is to provide financial assistance to families of children who need organ transplants. The organization also provides support to these families through emotional counseling, educational programs, and advocacy efforts.

COTA's Programs and Services

COTA offers a variety of programs and services to help families of children who need organ transplants. These programs include:

- Financial assistance: COTA provides financial assistance to families to help cover the costs of transplant-related expenses, such as transportation, lodging, and medical bills.
- Emotional support: COTA provides emotional support to families through counseling, support groups, and educational programs.
- Advocacy: COTA advocates for policies that improve the lives of children who need organ transplants. The organization works to ensure that these children have access to quality medical care, financial assistance, and support services.

COTA's Impact

COTA has made a significant impact on the lives of children who need organ transplants. The organization has provided financial assistance to over 1,000 families, and its support services have helped thousands of families cope with the challenges of transplant.

COTA's advocacy efforts have also led to changes in public policy that have improved the lives of children who need organ transplants. The organization was instrumental in the passage of the National Organ Transplant Act of 1984, which established the Organ Procurement and Transplantation Network (OPTN). OPTN is a national system that matches organ donors with recipients, and it has helped to increase the number of organ transplants performed each year.

COTA's Future

COTA is committed to continuing its mission of providing financial assistance and support to families of children who need organ transplants. The organization is working to expand its programs and services to reach more families, and it is advocating for policies that will improve the lives of all children who need organ transplants.

How to Help COTA

There are many ways to help COTA continue its important work. You can donate money, volunteer your time, or spread the word about the organization's mission. You can also sign up to be an organ donor, which will help to increase the number of organs available for transplant.

Every donation, volunteer hour, and organ donor registration helps COTA to provide hope and life to children who need organ transplants.

The Children Organ Transplant Association is a vital organization that provides financial assistance and support to families of children who need organ transplants. COTA's programs and services make a real difference in the lives of these families, and its advocacy efforts have helped to improve the lives of all children who need organ transplants.

If you are interested in helping COTA continue its important work, please donate money, volunteer your time, or spread the word about the organization's mission. Every little bit helps.
