Ivy and Bean are best friends. They love to play together, make up stories, and get into trouble. In their latest adventure, they decide to start a newspaper. They call it The Bean Report, and they're determined to make it the best newspaper in town.

But things don't go quite as planned. Ivy and Bean quickly realize that running a newspaper is a lot of work. They have to find stories to write, interview people, and design the layout. And when they finally get their first issue printed, they discover that nobody wants to read it.

Ivy and Bean are disappointed, but they don't give up. They decide to try a different approach. They start writing stories about their own lives, and they add some funny cartoons. And guess what? People start to love it!

The Bean Report becomes a huge success. Ivy and Bean are proud of their accomplishment, and they're glad that they didn't give up on their dream.
