

South America's Greatest Modern Conflict: Men At Arms 474

The Chaco War: A Brutal Conflict in the Heart of South America

The Chaco War, fought between Bolivia and Paraguay from 1932 to 1935, was the largest and most destructive conflict in South American history. The war was fought over a disputed territory in the Chaco Boreal, a remote and inhospitable region of scrubland and forest.

Both Bolivia and Paraguay had long claimed the Chaco Boreal, and tensions between the two countries had been simmering for years. In 1932, a series of border incidents escalated into a full-scale war. The war quickly became a bloody stalemate, as both sides dug in and fought a war of attrition.

The Chaco War was a brutal conflict, and the fighting was often savage. Both sides used chemical weapons, and the war saw some of the highest casualty rates of any conflict in the 20th century. By the time the war ended in 1935, over 100,000 people had been killed.

Men At Arms 474: The Soldiers of the Chaco War

This book tells the story of the Chaco War through the eyes of the men who fought it. The book is based on interviews with veterans of the war, and it provides a unique and personal perspective on this forgotten conflict.
